THE converting of natural fibres into a quality yarn necessitates at all stages of the manufacturing process exact testing of the material. Microscope and microbalance are equally important to the spinner as gill boxes, spinning frames or generating plant.

Synthetic or man-made fibres, being the most recent additions to the textile industry, require the most intensive research work. In close co-operation with the fibre producer we are endeavouring to ascertain spinning power and to improve quality. Every type of rayon staple is being carefully examined and the work carried out behind the scenes in our laboratories and experimental plants for the past 20 years has contributed to the development of man-made fibres.

Research work and development, coupled with the experience of over one hundred years in the field of silk spinning, will enable us to place better and more useful yarns at the disposal of our customers.

Honegger-Lavater

From humble beginnings, the Swiss textile industry has risen to predominant rank on world markets. Ever since 1851, Messrs. R. Zinggeler have been supplying silk yarns of the finest quality: special silk and mixture twists for weaving, haberdashery, hose and cable manufacture.
