Les modèles Rexy en Iroperm sont aussi les premières chemises pour messieurs qui ne doivent pas être repassées mais qui peuvent être lavées dans la machine et même cuites.

Brilliant, fast shades on cotton, linen, viscose rayon, and wool offer a wealth of new possibilities in textile design

® Cibacron Dyes

Original CIBA products

C I B A

Colour, and harmonious combinations of colour – this is something we all love. Colour brightens our everyday life in the eye-appealing textiles we use for clothing and home. From time immemorial, man has felt the need to adorn himself and his surroundings with colour and, until the advent of synthetic dyes some 100 years ago, this he did with the products Nature provided – plants, insects, molluscs. Brilliant though the colours were, they were not «fast» in the sense we use the word to-day; their brilliance faded in the sun's light.

Synthetic dyes have now replaced the natural products, but, even though the range available has expanded tremendously since Perkin discovered mauveine in 1856, it was not until very recently that great brilliance could be united with high fastness – not until CIBA developed the Cibacron dyes.

With Cibacron dyes the dyer and printer can produce very fast shades of great brilliance on cellulosic fibres and wool, e.g.

dress materials	track suits
raincoat materials	scarves
blouse materials	shoe canvas
velvets	flock-printed materials
corde	towelings
knitted goods for outerwear and underwear	ribbons
swimsuits	and a variety of other styles
bath robes

Cibacron dyes – novel, fast, and brilliant – a true chemical bond linking dye with cellulosic or wool fibre.
