Once again, as every spring, the London Publicity Centre for Swiss Textiles organized a show-case display entitled "Textiles Suisses" in all the Swiss Centre Restaurants in Leicester Square in the West End of London. This exhibition served above all to help make the public aware of the Swiss fabrics and embroideries available at this season in stores and shops throughout the country, and at the same time publicized the work of this organization.

Thousands of people, including many from abroad, visited the restaurants daily and showed considerable interest in the materials and fashion articles displayed there with details of their origin. In the main entrance to the restaurants were four very attractive montages of materials on four panels in toning colours featuring samples of fabrics from four leading London stores: Army and Navy Stores of Westminster, Dickins & Jones, Regent Street; Harrods,
