VORWORT.

Im Sommer 1931 veranstaltete die zürcherische Sekundarlehrerkonferenz eine Zusammenkunft der Englischlehrer zum Zwecke einer Besprechung des Lehrmittels "English for Swiss Boys and Girls". Im Mittelpunkt der Diskussion stand der erste Teil des Buches. Es wurde eine Kürzung desselben und, wenn möglich, eine größere Abwechslung im Stoffe verlangt. (Dieser sei nicht nur aus dem Schulleben, sondern auch aus andern Gebieten zu schöpfen.) Ich hatte kurz vorher den Mitgliedern der Englischlehrmittelkommission zwecks Orientierung den Entwurf zu einer solchen Abänderung skizziert. Anlässlich der Konferenz wurde gewünscht, dieser Entwurf möchte ausgearbeitet im Jahrbuch veröffentlicht werden.

Nachdem ich mich im Laufe des Jahres eingehend mit dem Stoff auseinandergesetzt habe, bin ich zu der festen Überzeugung gekommen, daß eine Kürzung des ersten Teils empfehlenswert ist; ein Hinübergreifen in andere Stoffgebiete hingegen große Nachteile mit sich brächte.

Ich muß noch einmal klar festlegen, daß ich mir im ersten Teil eine langsame und sorgfältige Einführung in die englische Aussprache als Hauptziel vorgesteckt habe, und nur, weil auf unserer Stufe eine rein theoretische Phonetik nicht angezeigt ist, mußte ich parallel dazu auch die Sprache in den Unterricht aufnehmen. Doch bleibt für mich das Hauptgewicht bei der Phonetik; der Lese- und Grammatikstoff ist vorerst mehr Dreingabe. Das ist der Grund, warum ich den ersten Teil sehr leicht, ja, wie mir vorgeworfen wurde, zu leicht gestaltet und nur allmählich den Schwerpunkt auf Lesestoff und Grammatik hinüber verschoben habe.

Ich mache die Beobachtung, daß viele Lehrer im ersten Teil zu langsam vorwärtskommen, nicht weil sie, wie es auch vor kommt, die Phonetik zu ausführlich treiben, sondern weil sie den Leseteil und die Grammatik allzu gründlich behandeln. Liegt nicht vielleicht hierin der Grund, daß von einzelnen der erste Teil als zu eintönig empfunden wird? Ich habe in den ersten Lektionen des zweiten Teils alle grammatischen Schwierigkeiten wiederholt und auch ausgiebig in der immensen Repetition berücksichtigt, damit die etwas lockere Behandlung der Grammatik im ersten Teil sich rechtfertigen lasse.

Mein zweites Ziel war, die Möglichkeit zu schaffen, Englisch in weitem Maße als Unterrichts- und Schulsprache zu brauchen, sobald alle Laute eingeführt sind. Dies ist mir tatsächlich gelungen, da der Wortschatz zielbewußt zusammengestellt worden ist. Ich betrachte dies als einen wesentlichen Vorzug meines Lehrmittels, den vielleicht nicht alle Lehrer zu schätzen und auszunützen wissen, auf den zu verzichten ich aber nicht gewillt bin.

Man unterschätzt im allgemeinen die Schwierigkeiten, die dem Verfasser eines Elementarlehrmittels durch die beschränkte Lautkenntnis der Schüler verursacht werden. Es entstehen leicht auffallende und unnatürlich wirkende Lücken, die sich nicht durch den Stoff, sondern einzig durch die Lautbeschränkung aufzwingen. Je verschiedenere Stoffgebiete angeschnitten werden, desto schlimmer tritt dieser Nachteil in Erscheinung und desto rascher schwilkt anderseits das Vokabularium der einzelnen Lektionen an. Eine Reihe von Versuchen haben mich davon überzeugt, daß man diese Schwierigkeiten nur dadurch bemeistern kann, daß man im gleichen Stoffgebiet bleibt, bis alle Laute eingeführt sind. In diesem Zeitpunkt sollte aber auch der Stoff aus dem Schulleben möglichst erledigt sein, damit nichts mehr nachgeholt zu werden braucht, denn jetzt rechtfertigt die Ausdrucksfähigkeit des Schülers eine andere Materie.

Da meine Überzeugung mir verbietet, ohne weiteres dem Wunsche nach Abwechslung nachzugeben, habe ich vorliegende Arbeit in zwei Varianten ausgeführt. Die erste greift in andere Stoffgebiete über; die zweite hingegen bleibt bei der Schule. Die Spaltung beginnt mit der fünften Lektion.

Beim Schulstoff bleibend, kann ich den nötigen Wortschatz in neun Lektionen bewältigen, indem ich durchschnittlich pro Lektion fünfundzwanzig neue Wörter einführe, anstatt wie im Buche deren einundzwanzig. Hingegen muß ich bei der ersten Version, wo ich mich auch in andern Lebensgebieten bewege, noch eine zehnte Lektion einschalten, um den Wortschatz aus dem Schulleben einigermaßen zu vervollständigen. Trotzdem steigt die durchschnittliche Wortzahl pro Lektion auf siebenundzwanzig und sind etwa vierzehn wichtige Wörter, die in der zweiten Version leicht mitzunehmen waren, noch nicht berücksichtigt. Wohl sind aus andern Stoffgebieten Wörter vorweggenommen, aber wegen der Lautbeschränkung ist kein Gebiet erledigt worden. Der zweite Teil des Buches wäre somit ganz unwesentlich entlastet.

Beide Versionen bedeuten eine wesentliche Kürzung gegenüber meinem Lehrmittel. Zudem sind folgende Verbesserungen zu vermerken. Die Frageform mit "to do" wird schon in Lektion sechs eingeführt, anstatt erst in Lektion neun. Ich mußte damit zuwarten bis zur Behandlung der Laute (u) und (u:), und diese können nicht gut vor (ʌ) und (ju:) eingeschoben werden, da die Aussprache von: "ruler, blue, chew, etc." als Ausnahme aufgefaßt werden muß. Als Lehrer nehme ich mir allerdings im Unterricht die Freiheit, die Frage mit "to do" schon von Lektion vier an zu verwenden. Der Schüler versteht sie rasch und braucht ja in der Antwort "to do" nicht, so lange ich keine Entscheidungsfrage stelle.

Die erste Einführung in die Aussprache ist dadurch erleichtert worden, daß der Laut (w) und das phonetisch schwere Wort (with) erst in der zweiten Lektion vorkommen und die Lautverbindung "this is the" auf die dritte Lektion zurückgestellt ist. Aus methodischen Gründen ist der Laut (ɔi) erst nach (ɔ:) eingereiht worden. Ich habe mir erlaubt, versuchsweise die Betonung durch Fettdruck zu bezeichnen, da ich immer wieder die Beobachtung mache, daß die übliche Bezeichnung von den Schülern leicht übersehen wird. Um dem in den ersten zwei Lektionen fühlbaren Mangel an Hauptwörtern zu begegnen, sind "pin, knife, key, letter" hinzugefügt worden.

Beide Arbeiten sind so angelegt, daß sie die ersten vierzehn Lektionen meines Buches ersetzen können und reibungslos zur fünfzehnten Lektion hinüberleiten.

Ich unterbreite nun beide Versionen meiner Kollegenschaft. Für welche der beiden sie sich entscheiden will, wird sich bei einer späteren Umfrage erweisen. Hoffentlich werden diese beiden Entwürfe dem richtigen Verständnis für die besondern Schwierigkeiten meiner Methode begegnen und einem allseitig befriedigenden Ausbau meines Lehrmittels den Weg ebnen.

Illnau, im April 1932.

Exercises.

1. A pupil shows one of the known objects, and states that it is his. His neighbour confirms, "It is your ink", etc.
2. Arrange some objects on the desk and form sentences with between and beside.

* Die Hinweise unter "Leseübung" beziehen sich auf "English for Swiss Boys and Girls".

3. A pupil forms a sentence and tells another pupil to repeat it.
4. A pupil writes a sentence on the blackboard, he reads the sentence and repeats it, always saying what he is doing.
5. A pupil commands, using one of the following verbs: to clean, to give, to write, to read, to repeat. Another pupil obeys and says what he is doing; a third pupil repeats the sentence in the second person.
6. Replace in the sentences of lesson 1 the 1st person by the 2nd and vice versa.

Grammatik.

LESSON 3. (three)

An English Lesson.

I have an English lesson. I sit in my desk. The teacher stands beside the table. He speaks English. I see and I hear him. The teacher lays a pin, a needle, a pencil, and a knife on the table. He says: "This is a pin and that is a needle. The pin has a head and the needle has an eye." He takes the knife and says: "This is the handle and that is the blade. This is a black handle and that is a clean blade."

Then he fetches a slip of white paper and lays it on my desk and says: "Write your name!" I write "Dan". The teacher spells it: "D-A-N Dan".

(iz) wird mit es geschrieben, unter Vermeidung von ee.

Unregelmäßige 3. Person: he has, he says (sez).

LESSON 4. (four)

Our Pencil-box.

Show me your boxes!

What have you in your boxes?

We open our boxes and show you. We take our pencils out of our boxes. We lay them on our desks. Now we take our penholders out of our boxes and lay them beside our pencils. What is that? Is it a box?

No, it is not. It is a pen-case.

What is in your pen-cases?

We open them. We take out a pen. We close our pen-cases and our boxes.

Can you lock your box?

Yes, I can. I lock it with a key.

No, I cannot. My box has no lock.

The lesson is over and we go home.

Vowels: ə, ou, au. Consonants: p - b, t - d, k - g, f - v, s - z.

Leseübung. ə, ou, au: Seite XII und XIII.
p - b, k - g, t - d, f - v, s - z und Vokale Seite XIII.

Exercises.

1. Give the plural of: pen, pin, key, letter, exercise, ink, sentence, lesson, table, needle, head, eye, handle, blade, teacher, pencil, desk, box, penholder, pen-case, lock.
2. Me, you, it, them. (object):
 - a) 1st pupil: "I show you the box, the pen", etc.
2nd pupil: "You show me the box, I see it."
 - b) The 1st pupil shows several boxes, etc. and the other pupil answers accordingly, using the pronoun them.
3. A pupil asks his neighbour: "What have you in your box?" or he asks the whole class: "What have you in your boxes?" and is answered accordingly in the 1st person singular or plural.
4. Form sentences in the first person plural using the verbs of exercise 5 page 57!
5. Form sentences with: We can, you can, I can, he can!
6. Form sentences with: I, you, he, we cannot!
7. Form questions with can and answer with: "Yes, I can," or "No, I cannot!"
8. Form questions with: "Have you?" and answer: "Yes, I have," or "No, I have not!"

Spell: knife, ink, speak, black, on, case, lock, desk, open, close, can, no.

O = (ou) K = (kei)

Grammar.

Für die Aussprache und die Rechtschreibung gelten die gleichen Regeln wie für die Endungen der 3. Person Einzahl. (Lesson 3)

LESSON 5. (five)

1st version.

Lunch.

For lunch mother gives us some bread. She cuts it with the bread-knife.

I like the crust, my brother likes the crumb of the bread. I like stale bread; he likes new bread.

What the pupils have for lunch: James brings bread and butter. Jack has bread and jam. Bob likes brown bread; Gerald likes bread and cheese. John eats some bread and chocolate. Jane brings some apples and the teacher has an orange.

Exercises.

- Do the exercise 2 page 59 but the pupils answer in chorus:
“You show us the box, the boxes.”
- Tell me what you eat for lunch, for breakfast! (Frühstück)
- Tell me what you like! (without using the word “some”.)
- Form sentences similar to the following ones, by inserting other substantives!

My mother gives me an apple, gives me some apples.
Our mother gives us an apple, some apples.

- Sentences: What I see, clean, give you, dip in the ink, write, hear, repeat, take, have, lay on the table, on the desk, fetch, speak, spell, show, open, close, lock, cut, like, eat, bring. (In different persons.)

Spelling:

Spell: see, quite, between, lesson, needle, spell, cannot, now, apple, cut, like, eat, of, stale, new, five, us, some, double.

Grammar.1. Person Mehrzahl. We take our penholder. You see us.Subjekt: we. Objekt: us. Possessivpronomen: our.I like bread. Mother gives us some bread.Jane likes apples. She eats some apples.

Some wird ähnlich gebraucht wie im Französischen der „article partitif“, nämlich wenn es sich um eine nicht näher bestimmte Anzahl oder Menge handelt (wo man im Deutschen vor der Einzahl „etwas“, vor der Mehrzahl „einige“ setzen kann).

LESSON 6. (six)

1st version.

Bad Teeth.

Why does your brother not like to eat the crust of the bread?
 He has bad teeth, I think. He sometimes has the toothache.
 I have good teeth; I like to eat stale bread and to chew the crust.

When do you clean your teeth?

Every evening. Look at my white teeth!

How do you clean them?

I clean them with tooth-paste and a tooth-brush. I do not move the brush to and fro but up and down.

That's right! Do not neglect your teeth! Be thankful that you do not know what toothache is!

Yes, I am.

tooth (tu:θ)	to chew (tʃu:)	good (gud)
teeth (ti:θ)	to move (mu:v)	bad (baed)
toothache (tu:θeik)	to look at (luk)	sometimes (sʌmtaimz)

Vowels: u, u:.

Consonants: θ.

Incomplete Plosive Consonants.

Leseübung.

u, u: Pages XVII and XVIII. θ Page XIX, and:

δ-θ the theft, the thing, think mother, think of them, thank them, three of them, that tooth, that thing, that mouth.

Incomplete Plosive Consonants: a good pen, good teeth, a good paste, a good brush, a good brother, good bread, good cheese, good jam, good chocolate, a good pencil, a good blade, a good teacher, a bad pen, bad teeth, etc. a black pen, black paper and white paper, that table, that blade, that teacher, that paper, that tooth, that pen, that pin, that key, that pencil, that box, that desk, that crust, that butter, that cheese, that jam.

Exercises.

1. Form imperative sentences and change them into the negative!
Do not take a slip of paper!
2. Change these sentences into questions! Do you take a slip of paper? etc. Also in other persons: Does Bob take a slip of paper? and answer: "Yes, I do. No, I do not." or "Yes, he does. No, he does not."
3. Change into the negative form: Bob cleans his teeth every evening. He cleans them with a brush. He moves the brush up and down. He likes to eat the crust. I like to eat the crumb of the bread. I neglect my teeth. I know what toothache is. We clean our teeth every evening.
4. Form questions with what, using the sentences of exercise 5 page 61! What do you see? What does the pupil clean? etc.
5. Form questions with why, how, and when!
6. What do you like to do?
7. Change your answers into questions, and answer them with yes and no, always repeating the auxiliary verb!
8. Translation: Warum hat Bob schlechte Zähne? Er vernachlässigt sie. Er reinigt sie nicht jeden Abend. Reinigst du deine Zähne? Ja, ich reinige sie mit einer Zahnbürste. Wann gehst du heim? Wie schließest du deine Schachtel? Wie schreibt er seine Übungen? Wann schreibt er sie?

Spell: with, English, has, fetch, this, that, he, his, him, white, then, show, go, what, them, home, lunch, cheese, jam, chocolate, Jack, James, John, Jane, tooth, teeth, toothache, paste, think, chew, neglect, know, do, does, look, when, sometimes, good, bad, how, thankful, up, down, to.

G = (dʒi:) J = (dʒei) H = (eitʃ)

Grammar.

Infinitiv. to cut, to bring, to go.

Der Infinitiv hat keine Endung. Um ihn von der Befehlsform zu unterscheiden, setzt man to davor.

Infinitiv von he is = to be (sein). I can hat keinen Infinitiv.

LESSON 7. (seven)

1st version.

Our Hair.

Look at Jack, Charley and John! They are three pupils of our class.

Let us compare the colour of their hair!

Jack has fair hair; Charley has dark hair; John's hair is brown.

We comb our hair with the comb and brush it with the brush.

Where do the pupils part their hair?

Jack parts it in the middle; Charley parts it on the left side and James on the right side. We look into the looking-glass to see if it is right.

When our hair is too long the hairdresser cuts it. He cuts it with the scissors. The scissors are sharp.

LESSON 8. (eight)

1st version.How Gerty learns her Lesson.

Gerty is a girl in our class. She generally does her lessons when she comes home. She learns them well. She looks up the new words and writes them in her vocabulary. Then she translates the lesson into German. She works hard. She generally writes her lesson on a slip of paper and compares it with her book. When she finds a mistake she corrects it. Now she knows her lesson. She feels happy. Who envies her? She likes school. Who likes school?

Questions: Who is Gerty? How does she learn her lessons? What does she look up? Where does she write them? What does she do then? How does she work? On what does she write her lesson? With what does she compare it? What does she do when she finds a mistake? How does she feel?

1. Replace in Lesson 8 Gerty by Bob, girl by pupil!
2. Form the sentences of exercise 5 page 61 using the possessive pronouns where ever possible!
3. Form questions with who!
4. Ask questions about the subjects and objects of the following sentences! Example: I clean my pen. Who cleans my pen? What do I clean? He sees a mistake. We correct it. You write a sentence. You read your name. Bob takes a slip of paper. He lays it on the desk. James spells the new words. We open our boxes. The pupils close their pen-cases. Our teacher speaks English. I comb my hair. We clean our teeth. We can form questions. We can write the new words. The pupils close their boxes. They lock them. Gerty likes school. She can read her lesson.
5. Form questions with where, when, and how to have the following answers: We lay our pencils into our boxes. She cleans her teeth every evening. For lunch I eat bread and butter. He sees a mistake in his exercise. Gerty works well. I look into the looking-glass when I comb my hair.
6. Ask questions with who about the subjects of the above sentences!
7. Conjugate in exercise 3 page 63 and in exercise 5 page 67 the sentences that have a possessive adjective, including the three genders he, she, it. (For pronouns see "English" page 24 § IV.)

Spell: easy, lay, say, yes, why, Charley, Gerty, way, play, generally, happy, gay, girl, word, book, German, mistake, class, school, learn, work, translate, make, find, correct, feel, she, her, while, well, glad, who, eight.

LESSON 10.

1st version.

At School.

Our master stands in front of the class. He asks questions and we answer him. When we know an answer we hold up our hands. Our master always corrects us when we make a mistake. When we do not pronounce distinctly we must say the sentence over and over again. We learn some of these sentences by heart.

The teacher generally dictates some sentences, and we write them in our exercise-books. When a pupil does not understand he holds up his hand.

We blot our exercise with a blotting-paper, and then a boy collects the exercise-books and puts them on the table beside the bottle of red ink.

LESSON 9. (nine)

2nd version.

What there is in our school-room.

Our school-room has four walls, a floor, and a ceiling. There are also four windows. These are opposite the door.

The cupboard is in the corner. In the other corner there is a chair. In front there is the table with a bottle of red ink on it.

Where is the blackboard? It is in front of the class. It is a large one. Our teacher often writes on it with chalk.

Are there desks for the boys and girls? Of course there are. They are in the middle of the room. The tall pupils sit behind; the small ones sit in front.

Exercises.

1. Tell me what there is in front of the class, in the middle of the room, behind the class, beside the class, on the table, on the desk, in the cupboard, in the pencil-box, in the pen-case.
2. Is there a bottle on the table? Yes, there is. Are there many rubbers in your satchel? No, there are not.
Form such questions and answer them!
3. This is a tall pupil and that is a small one.
Pen, clean, black. Pupil, good, bad. Girl, happy, unhappy.

Boy, thankful, thankless (undankbar). Rubber, brown, red.
 Pupil, careful, careless. Handle, black, white. Sentence, easy, difficult (schwierig).

4. Change these sentences into the plural!
5. Translation: Sitzen die Schüler auf ihren Bänken? Ja. Die Kleinen sitzen vorne, die großen sind hinten. Der Lehrer kommt herein. Bob steht auf. Er sagt: „Ich habe keinen Federhalter. Ich kann ihn nicht finden. Oh, ich sehe ihn, er ist auf Charleys Pult.“ Charley sagt: „Das ist nicht dein Federhalter.“ Bob antwortet: „Oh ja, ich kenne ihn, es ist ein roter; es ist ein neuer.“

Spell: exercise, give, have, box, five, vocabulary, over. Also the new words of this lesson.
