and the holes in a perfect cheese are about one inch in diameter and one to three inches apart. Gruyere cheese incidentally are about six inches thick, and can be anything up to four feet in diameter or 220lb. in weight. Gorgonzola is the most popular blue-veined cheese—and the subject of most jokes. The ripening process in its home in Lombardy is carried out by specialist ripeners, who carry off the cheese when it is quite young—as soon as it has assumed its shape. In their retreats in hillside caves, they drysalt it, perforate it to admit air and encourage the growth of the characteristic blue mould. It takes about three months to train a really good Gorgonzola. Our English Stilton, the most popular of the home-produced blue-veined cheese, takes about four to six months to ripen fully. For export each cheese is packed in a tim made to measure, as its shape is apt to be a little irregu-lar. Incidentally most cheese are well ban-daged in their youth in order to preserve their figure, which, in the case of the best cheese, is slightly more rotund at the waist than at either top, or bottam slightly more rotund at the waist than at either top or bottom. top or

But the most curious method of packing cheese is surely that adopted in the Netherlands cheese is surely that adopted in the Netherlands for Gouda cheese for export to foreign coun-tries, and in Italy with the Provoloni, for here the mature cheese are given a bladder covering, at first sight indistinguishable, which protects the cheese from insects and the like, and im-parts no objectionable flavour. In this country we cat about 9.5lb, of cheese per head of the population. In Switzer-land the consumption is about 23lb, and in Canada 3lb.

Canada 3lb.

Canada 3lb. The English consumption represents about 3,725,000 cwts., but of this 2,868,000 cwts, is imported, or 77 per cent., which is a great pity, for English Cheddar and Cheshire are models for the whole world in cheesemaking, while Lancashire cheese is pre-eminent for its toast-ing qualities, the ripe cheese melting down very easily into a smooth, custard-like substance, with a rish and ampatiging aupachange. with a rich and appetising appearance.

I think I will leave it at that, because nobody, I think, is particularly interested in any more "food" news just now and I don't know any-thing else to write about myself, my grey matter still feeling somewhat sluggish! Also, Guets Nõijaahr!

The theory is that a man so shod will never be at a loss for a toothpick and can traverse a Swiss snowscape more rapidly than one wear-ing gumboots or carpet slippers.

ing gumboots or carpet slippers. Theoretically this may be so; but I suspect that it is somewhat less simple than it sounds, and that the embryo Winter Sportsman would do well to rehearse the motions privily at home before mingling with those who were born, so to speak, with silver skis in their mouths. Judging by the photographs, a ski-ster who has taken a bad toss bears a strong resemblance to one of those wire puzzles found in Christmas crackers and must be nearly as hard to unravel.

crackers and must be nearly as hard to unravel. In fact, I should say that it is considerably easier for the novice to commit felo-de se by this method than for a rich man to pass through the eye of a camel.

the eye of a camel. My own taste, therefore, inclines rather towards toboganing, which seems to be un-skilled labour of the simplest type. At least, I take it that any man weighing more than two stone and having some slight knowledge of the Law of Gravity can lie on his stomach on a wooden tray and slide down a mountain. But the snag here, no doubt, is that a to-bogan is more easily started than stopped. More than one inexperienced solo toboganist, I expect, has left Switzerland in a hurry and a cloud of snow without paying his hotel bill. There is another and larger brand of tobog-

a cloud of snow without paying his hotel bill. There is another and larger brand of tobog-an, I understand, which is usually manned by a representative selection of the aristocracy and travels down a specially prepared track that makes the descent to Avernus look like a one-in-two up-gradient. I gather that there is no more stirring spectacle than one of these to-bogans in full cry, shedding here an earl and there a visconntess, jettisoning an occasional knight, finging a baroness or two into the next cantonment, and eventually bringing the mad frolic to a close by wrapping itself round a tree.

tree. I should imagine that mixed toboganing I should imagine that mixed toboganing of this kind is very stimulating to the gentler emotions and liable to produce repercussions at St. Margarets, Westminster. Even a Modern Girl is apt to feel tender towards a man in whose company she has plunged into a crease or invited availated and high Andle the rest or impinged against an Alp. And as the man is probably feeling pretty tender, too, the upshot or outcome is almost a foregone conclusion.

Indeed there would seem to be something in the very air of Switzerland that blunts the wits and induces a tendency to wedlock, judging by the number of Society Romances that blossom there every season.

Apart from those that are brought on by toboggan accidents, the majority. I fancy, blossom after dark, because comparatively few girls look their best in voluminous serge trousers and semi-football boots. If Cleopatra had been obliged to wear the uniform of a Winter Sportswoman, she would never have gained more than a purely local reputation. But at night, when the moon has risen be-hind the Bölsterhorn and the plaintive yödel of the chamois echoes from crag to crag of the towering Röttenalp; when the faint cries of those visitörs who have just received their bills—then it is that He comes all over sheepish and offers Her a ninety-nine years' lease of the

those visitors who have just received their bills—then it is that He comes all over sheepish and offers Her a ninety-nine years' lease of the back seat of his tobogan. And She, bearing her mother's advice in mind, blushes hurriedly and says "Yes" with such rapidity and vehemence that it sounds like a tyre-burst. Ah (as we oldsters say) me! All this, of course, is pure conjecture on my part, inasmuch as I have never been nearer to the Matterhorn than the seaward end of Worthing Pier. But when my ship comes in, I intend to pop across to Switzerland and shake an en-thusiastic ski, partly because I need the exer-cise, partly because I have always liked con-densed milk, and partly because I long to see my muffler in the weekly papers: "Snapped In The Saddling-Enclosure At St. Moritz. From Left to Right: Sir Hugo Watt-Hoe, Miss Anaesthesia Yammering, Captain ' Bosh' Fotheringhamptonson, Lady Turnham-Greene and" and

Not a very unreasonable ambition, I think.

Putting the Blue in Stilton

That the consumption of cheese in Switzer-land amounts to about 23 lbs, per head of the population, as well as a few other interesting bits of "cheesy information" are contained in the next article, culled from the Manchester Evening Chronicle, 5th December:

There are a good many jokes about cheese, most of which are rather more ancient than the cheese to which they refer. Here are a num-ber of interesting facts about cheese gleaned from a recently-issued report of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries, which you may or may not have heard before.

Did you know that there is a cheese known as the Dunlop, not because of its resilience and hard-wearing properties, but because it is made at the village of Dunlop in Scotland ?
