FEDERAL.

THE FEDERAL BUDGET.

The FEDERAL BODGET. The Swiss Parliament recently approved the Budget of the Confederation for 1938. Expendi-ture is estimated at 542.8 million francs and revenue at 519.8 million francs, leaving an estimated deficit of 23 million francs. The Federal Government has been authorised to levy for another three years the Extraordinary Crisis Tax, introduced three years ago, and to increase slightly the rates of tax on high incomes.

sugnity the rates of tax on high incomes. These taxes will yield about 30 million francs in 1938. Customs duties are estimated to yield 209 million franes, the duty on petrol 53 millions, the duty and tax on tobacco 40 millions and the tax on drinks 12 millions. The yield of the stamp duty is forecast at 60 millions and of the military tax (paid by those who do not serve in the Army) at 4 millions. Another 6 million francs will be produced by the rise in the price of oils and fats. of oils and fats.

Interest payments will absorb 97 million francs in 1938 , while 83 millions will be used either for debt repayments or for increasing the various reserve funds. Unemployment insurance and public works will require an expenditure of over 61 million francs, while 96 millions will be devoted to national defence.

To the Budget deficit of 23 million francs should be added the deficit of 23 million francs should be added the deficit of the Federal rail-ways, making 54 millions in all. Since, however, the Budget includes a payment of 43 million francs to adjust the finances of the Federal rail-ways the real deficit is some 11 millions. The Budget has not been received with much satisfaction in inductival and component enclose satisfaction in industrial and commercial circles. Despite the Government's promises, expenditure Despite the Government's promises, expenditure is still rising. It was, however, stated in Parlia-ment that expenditure has not increased very much, since 20 per cent. of expenditure during recent years has been devoted to the redemption $\frac{d}{d}$ of debt.

It was to repay debt that taxation had to be increased and new duties set up. Taxation is actually very heavy. In 1935 the total yield of Federal, cantonal and municipal taxes was 948 Federal, cantonal and municipal taxes was 948 million francs, a rise of 200 millions since 1920. It now represents about 237 francs annually per head of population. And Customs duties bring in an annual total of nearly 200 million francs. Public opinion has repeatedly pronounced against the steady increase in State subsidies. In 1938 they will reach about 200 million francs, against 105 millions in 1930, 245 millions in 1934 and about 220 millions in 1996.

and about 220 millions in 1936. BANKING. The liquidation of the legacy of the pre-devaluation crisis made further progress. Most of the banks, which had to apply for a moratorium during 1935 and 1936, underwent a definite re-construction and returned to a normal régime. The year witnessed a heavy influx of refugee money, and the resumption of foreign lending activities. Among others, a credit was granted to Italy, and a loan to the French railways. This resumption of lending abroad was viewed with disfavour by large sections of Swiss public opinion, and pressure was brought to bear upon the banks and the authorities to prevent it. In order to reduce the temptation to lend abroad, measures were taken to discourage the influx of foreign funds. At the request of the Swiss foreign funds. At the request of the Swiss National Bank, the banks decided to stop the payment of interest on any foreign deposits for a period of less than nine months, to charge a com-mission of 1 per cent. per annum on deposits up to 6 months, and to refuse to accept any deposits for periods of less than one month. These measures did not, of course, affect the balances and short deposits of foreign banks kept for the purpose of their current foreign exchange requirements.

COMMUNISM IN SWITZERLAND.

In one of our recent numbers, reference was made to the successful actions of the Cantons of Neuchitel and Geneva in making Communism illegal, it being decided that as the Communist International was a terrorist organisation, the Communist Party was an "illegal and dan-gerons" organisation, and must be suppressed under the terms of the Federal Constitution. This decision was later-confirmed by a public vote which resulted, in both cases, in a large majority against Communism. The Communists, however, appealed to the Federal Tribunal (the supreme judicature of Switzerland) on the con-stitutionality of these laws, but they were defeated In one of our recent numbers, reference was sufficience journation of the con-stitutionality of these laws, but they were defeated recently when the Federal Tribunal, after a very interesting debate, held that the Communist Party, as a section of the Communist Inter-national, is bound to further by all means, legal and illegal, the cause of world revolution and the "dictatorship of the proletariat," which in itself dictatorship of the proletariat," which in itself is fundamentally contrary to the spirit of Swiss democracy based on the principle of political equality for all citizens. Thus the aims as well as the methods of the Communist Party must certainly be defined as "dangerous to the State," says the Federal Tribunal. Under these condi-tions, having outlawed itself and a second tions, having outlawed itself, such an association cannot have the benefit of constitutional freedom.
